My Dear Harriet I have just received your fine letter. I had another kind and interesting in the sense of yours. I have and the letter from him this day; which I have answered in the same sense. He says that he and have carried two members for the City of the hour!!

I had not heard any thing from Mr. P. & K. since Saturday the 23. of April.
The only thing that I recd is that the arrangement should not be made public. There is nothing lower the influence of these Radical gentlemen is must as getting their votes see that real gentlemen do not put up with their insolence, and that the former are ever ready to oblige for it.

My opinion is that it is best case thing are known.
The thing cannot effectually exist now if he would. The Ministers know it perfectly.
But it is a great object for them to conceal for a time until there is any difference between PM & his Ministers; and there will be much embarrassment in informing the public

As to they will not go to the City.

true friend B

My Dear George I have received your Note; and am very sorry that I cannot recommence to look for the Office of Minister to France.

I am very glad that King is ill. His sickness will not only aggravate all one of the others.

I entertain no doubt of the sense and intention to get rid of said bill; nor of the calculation of the intention as soon as it will suit those who entertain it. The Opposition of Mr H has proved to be unavailing hence and every other at the disposition of those not very likely to stop their hands at any thing.

Not every thing in my Power I prevail upon the Pitt Club to postpone their business.
They cannot continue to call on the Pitts but they as a Jury Party Club, on the day that they has passed for the annual Celebration of his own Birth. They must eventually find upon another day; and the circumstances of the moment was to have understood it seems to me that they should commence the proposals in this year.

But they decline. We are all human beings and nobody obeys. They are now crying out against me because I don't attend their meetings not having yet appeared at least or at all in public or if you were more certain I would send my carriage for you. However as I have only one pair of hands this night it will be difficult for me to do so

Commissariat

Dear Sir Henry,

I inclose to you two small printed Books of Instructions issued by me in France in 1817. and in Portugal on the last Expedition; but with the exception of articles 28 to 37. in the latter, they will do little more than show how the accounts of an Army in the Field may be kept with success. If however your aim be to form a code for the government of the Commissariat hereafter, founded on the practice of the last war, in which the detailed Duties of the subordinate officers are to be defined; you had better apply to Mr. Secretary Stewart of the Treasury to get from Mr. Archer one of the Senior Clerks a Manuscript code which I prepared with great labour for the late Mr. Hill about 6. or 7. years ago; but of which

which I retained no Copy, having drawn the Instructions up from a Map of Documents during my leisure when abroad in Scotland: It was His intention to have published and spread them, but I rather think the intention fell to the ground owing to one of these Changes in the Management of the Commissariat which unhappily for its efficiency have in my opinion been far too frequent.

To do the Thing completely however the Treatise, I add or whatever may be intended should extend much further, and show as in the enclosed paper (which I beg you will have the goodness to return) how an Army is formed and how the Individuals of a Commissariat should be attached; in order to give celerity to the Movements of the Troops whether acting in a Body or separately by divisions or Brigades.

The great Engine of Transport too should be amply treated of; for it may fairly be considered the left arm of a Garrison: General; as many may be deemed his Right; yet with us it is little attended to

are often under the present System employed where one would be sufficient.

A material part to be considered too is the forming the Head Quarters from all superfluous Departments; and the Commissaries attached to Troops from all unnecessary detail in point of sending Returns &c. &c.: on this latter point should Mr. Jeffin be selected to draw up what is intended he may possibly go too much into Minutiae, because never having been himself attached to Troops he may not be fully aware of the Trouble which is incurred in rendering what after all is in many cases of very little Importance to Commissariat efficiency.

Since the late War the Military Chests have been placed in Charge of the Commissariat; & whilst this continues there is not the smallest necessity for a Deputy Paymaster General; as the Checks for the pay of the Army (after the Commissary of accounts has examined the warrants) can be drawn by a person in the Comm. General's Office of of payments; thereby saving the heavy expense of the Paymaster General's Department to the public, besides disencumbering the Head Quarter of an Establishment which would in Charge of the that must have met to nothing to do & that little occurring only once a month whilst the Retirees of the Office of Clerk &c. produce a heavy drain on the Head Quarter for <sup>daily</sup> ~~forming~~? who have to supply them.

There is no man who knows any thing of an Army but must know of what importance it is to have a good Commissariat with a view to the efficiency of that Army; the more especially with a British one, where the Comm. General is made the Arch over which all its expenses must in the first instance pass; and the Govt. may rest assured that the Education & practical Experience of Commissariat Officers costs them many a heavy Lesson, and when gained they should not be lent to the public; yet to say, the Department is administered by an Establishment in which there is not even a solitary practical Man; an Establishment too liable to be influenced by Changes of Government &c. &c., by which the Reward of the executive Officers too often becomes a matter of Chance or Interest - of this I am myself a striking Instance; and I maintain it to show not only that I am a Dissatisfied Man and therefore not perhaps the proper who may be best consulted on these Matters; but also to point out that where Men's Services go unregistered and unattended to; their Zeal & efficiency will diminish in proportion to the uncertainty of their Reward; and I feel perfectly satisfied that make what Case you please, it must like all others be well administered or it will be inefficient.

Yrs most sincerely

R. Artels.

to; we have no regularly constituted Commissariat Train, nor even the nucleus of one, for what is called the Waggon Train is from its formation worn & then useless for Commissariat purposes; nor can I give a better illustration of this than by telling you, that when we moved from the North of Portugal into Badajoz, the Duke of Wellington suggested to me that the Waggon Train might from their Station at Coimbra be loaded with forage <sup>to the Army</sup>; my answer was that if they carried their own Wholes, women & Children, I should be perfectly satisfied!! <sup>and on</sup> the last occasion in Portugal, they <sup>Commissariat</sup> did the <sup>four</sup> pounds worth of service although the Expense of them was probably four or five Times that amount daily; indeed the only way almost in which they can according to their present formation be made useful is by attaching them to Regiments for the benefit of their Sick & Wounded; but even then when an Army is stationary and without fear of attack; there can be no earthly reason why (they so attached) they should be kept idle when Country parts have to be hired for bringing up <sup>them</sup> supplies a proportion of which they ~~may~~ <sup>will</sup> be Train are consuming. Their present formation too, generates in their Officers an inclination to keep them in Barricade, and a desire to be placed under the D.M. Tent rather than the Comm. General because under the latter they know well they may need to cede: a Train put <sup>now</sup> to be efficient should be under them who have the greatest interest in keeping it so.

I would suggest for a commissariat Train a wheel formed on Horse feet, the sides of which might fold down flat on the Body and be easily unhooked & stored away in Trampets; and in whatever country the disembarkation might take place, a Horse, Bullock or Mule might easily be made to draw it; it would pass over almost any Road practical to Artillery & any Man could drive it; whereas it requires much experience to drive four Horses; and unless they are properly driven, the two free Horses are soon worked out of Condition whilst the Sledge maintains them in good order. On detached Services too four Horses

The Gleig-Jerdan Intrigue

The group of letters between the Rev. G. R. Gleig and William Jerdan, and others relating to this correspondence appear to relate to an intrigue directed against the passing of the Reform Bill. Details are deliberately left obscure, and there are other matters involved, one described as the Portuguese matter, and another involving Prince Esterhazy.

Part of the plan seems to be to influence the newspaper, the Herald to publish articles written by Jerdan. Another concerns £1,000 given by Gleig, possibly at the instigation of Hardinge, to influence a man named Tarte. £750 is in fact given to Tarte but without the intended result being realized, whereupon Gleig tries unsuccessfully to recover the money from Jerdan. Jerdan pleads time for his machinations to become fruitful, and the two are soon at loggerheads.

Someone with a good knowledge of the political intrigue, infighting and manoeuvring during the year or more before the Quebec Act, should be able to throw light on the affair.

Thursday Night

Dear Sir

I have stopped at a Coffee House to write you a few lines, of which I hope you will, under circumstances excuse the oracular shortness & the Un-oracular explicitness.

I have seen the Party who, with proper reservation, is open to my proposition.

After ~~of~~ commencing a treaty of this delicate kind I feel that there can be no other agent except myself. Therefore in looking to the future my position as well as his will have to be considered.

I grounded my interference on probable new views of political parties & new condemnation in consequence of the struggle & varying aspects at home and abroad.

I urged the expediency of the — being linked to a powerful & moderate party.

I offered my services, & a sufficient guarantee that to him there sh<sup>d</sup> be advantages commensurate to any risk.

He willingly agreed to receive my writings - in fact that is open to me. But I showed that papers from my pen, if subject to alteration or rejection; or if neutralized by opposite matter w<sup>d</sup> not be sufficient -

The connexion must in short be close & consistent.

He said that preserving the independence of — & without risk he w<sup>d</sup> meet me on this basis.

This is the straight report of the interview in our inconvenient place liable to interruptions & we agreed to meet again at his private house on Tuesday (till when he is to be at Ramsgate) & he will listen to any distinct proposal from me.

I have now only to add respecting myself that I am so situated that I must also see my way clearly on embarking in an undertaking of this kind. My arrangements for carrying forward my own works, which produce £5000 a year - a moiety by my own & only income - must of necessity be of some price. I am no mercenary but with such a property I ought not to ~~the~~ stir, without an immediate & permanent assurance. By permanent I mean that I should not be called upon to break up my plan of life such a man would be a very valuable acquisition to the Government

: most of the things of which I have heard - and of the kind
: men distinguish themselves as well as they do in the present : circumstances - but just a man who would form a good place : for the children of the poor - I have not heard of any other : person who would be a better man than the one I have : mentioned - but I have not heard of any other person who : would be a better man than the one I have mentioned - without being secured against loss in a more temporary expedient.

I trust you will see the propriety of this - at any rate it is in my fixed course of perfect reserve.

But I leave myself farther for personal communication, for I am sure you will think my Oracles long wounded.

Only consider the business is of vast importance

Yours faithfully

troublesome but on passing to Brompton I beg to say that I shall be glad

I confess I am uneasy under the impression that I am acting disingenuously interfered much with our views, & I think it due to myself to decline more positively the moment I can do so, and state plainly that I will give no further assistance.

My dear Sir

Nothing from M. H. but a strange contre-temps. H. Ellis applied to get back the paper I showed you; & in Tarte's absence they gave him one of my Communications supposing it to be what he wanted. He came to me at the Thatched House yesterday; so that I suppose I have lost some friends if I have not made others.
I send the S. Times which will

I have procured an introduction to Prince Gherbazy, in a very suitable manner, from my friend Lord Fife.

I send the S. Times. It is a Paper of much influence & circulates above 10,000. It will gradually fall into my views. If the letter headed The Movement is approved, it might perhaps also be copied into the M. Post,

Standard, or other Journals attached to Tory interest.

I trust I shall be favoured with a constant supply of information & hints whereon to work

circumstances admit of making use of it.

My dear Mr. May

I enclose a letter which having been misdirected to Canterbury, reached me only this morning. The Contractors alluded to is more vexatious. Possibly it may amount for the continued hostility of the Herald; and if on Wednesday will exhibit a change of tone. Should the Contract be the case, - indeed should tomorrow's paper preserve its original bias, let me know, & I will come up on Wednesday

The papers, entitled the improve; but the first does not strike me as carrying much force along

My Darling

Tho' in great haste I cannot lose a post in saying a few words to you & just rec<sup>d</sup>. — which has I confess a little surprised me.

I have not been made aware that any of the parties were attempting "to trifle" with us: but the reverse

I had written to Mr T. before your note reached me, & to me it is no concern whether the decision is to be entirely off or on with that person. I shall act thereon as directed & offer no advice.

With regard to the simple request of returning £1000, after I have devoted so much precious time, devoted my own important affairs to others, <sup>as I stated I must,</sup> & borrowed £500 per month to enable me to do so & come forward with my full resources - it is a request I was not prepared to expect - I say nothing of expenses & engagements - It is remarkable that while the Opposition seem to wish to fly from their plan the Ministry have already felt the effect & are anxiously endeavouring to occupy the same ground. This however is not for

paper communication

With regard to myself my own position is made most uncomfortable

I shall be anxious to see you.

I sent S. J. to Mr. principal & request intelligence. I have not been honoured with an answer.

My dear Sir Murray

Not finding Mr Jordan at home I went at once to Mr Tark, to whom I introduced myself as a Mr Jordan. I found that Jordan had not played false; but that he had made use of a multitude of unnecessary reserves; & that the affair was as far from being a ~~justice~~ as can be. I took a different course, and though for Mr Tark declined, for the present, to be avowedly biased, he consented to introduce as leading articles any thing which we might send. Tomorrow the change of tone will be perceptible; but it will alter as it ought, by degrees; & the gentlemanly scruples are not, I perceive, so deep rooted as that he will not eventually become a convert to his own leading articles.

On the whole, therefore, I regard matters as brought into a satisfactory train; for all that will now <sup>be</sup> wanted is information.

Mr Jordan came in while I was sitting with Mr Tait. He has got good news of Prince Estabassy, & he must continue to be one of the communications with the R. - Considering that I am labouring under a sharp attack of Cholera, which kept me in misery all night, I don't think I have done a bad days work.

If you have any thing important to communicate to Jordan, send out a messenger with as little delay as possible to his house. You can give it with the recognized signature Z.

I am going to lie down, with the hope of abating <sup>my sickness</sup>

Dear Jordan

I have seen the third part & communicated the substance of our conversation. The result of this interview has been that I now write to request that you will without loss of time return to my address at Mr. Cusker in Queen St.
£750 out of the £1000 which I handed over to you. For this I hold myself personally responsible — indeed I must go so far as to make arrangements in case matters take an other diff. from what they do now to pay up even the £250. I must say that I cannot find fault with this decision; & as an old friend I assure you that of our character is involved in it.

You must bear in mind that with whatever may have passed between Col. J. & you with the bill of exchange. nor I have any concern - Our negotiation began on the morning when I called upon you & is entirely based in the written Memorandum of which you have a copy. I do not say that you have not exerted yourself - but you certainly did lead me to believe & in consequence conveyed the same impression to others, that things were in a much more forward state than proved to be the case.

It was on the faith of your assurance that the £1000 were wanted to be put into Mr. Carter's hands, that I gave the money to you - It does not appear that any such use has been made of it - As to your own remuneration, that you will of the affair being satisfactorily completed you cannot therefore urge that upon the £1000 you have the best claim.

You told me you would not even enter upon the business without incurring heavy expenses - You even say that there have been actually incurred. All this may be true, but it does appear strange that you should rush into such arrangements without the very point constituting the gist of our negotiation was doubtful - Temporary inconvenience I can understand you incurring, but no man of business ever would or could commit himself to a permanent change of his own affairs on a vague contingency of which the success was the contingent dependent upon of our exertions.

You may rely upon my using my best endeavours to secure to you a a just remuneration for the loss of it be lost after the last fortnight - but I must again request that the £750 be returned - Should you succeed in bringing on the negotiation again, that ~~the~~ other means will be forthcoming but it is not desirable on any acct, may I hold that it w<sup>d</sup>. create just ground of reluctance to enter into any new arrangement - Should the money procured for the single & express purpose of being put into Mr. East's hands, be not immediately returned.

As I have with g<sup>d</sup>. difficulty kept open this unsatisfactory negotiation during the last week, I need not tell you that it is of the greatest importance that no unfavorable impression be made upon the mind of those concerned - relative to the conduct either of myself or me - the only mode to restore confidence is to restore at once the £750. The door will thus be well kept open for the satisfactory arrang<sup>t</sup>. of any question connected with the £250 -

My dear Sir Henry

I missed my two O'Connell coach, & was obliged to travel all night, which gave me ample time for rumination.

We must not, in consequence of our disappointment in a late expectation, relinquish our designs in the press. A new channel through which to write must be sought out, and it strikes me that we have one at hand. There is a very liberal man, Mr Clarke is, I know, a man of strict integrity. He has a large acquaintance among the Editors & Reporters, & might be very advantageously employed as we recently endeavored to employ Mr Sheridan. Give this your consideration.

There is another man, a Mr Watts, a Reporter, & I should say a man of ~~very~~ <sup>quite</sup> known. I do not know him sufficiently to plunge with him at me in medias res; but if you like I can lay out <sup>my</sup> bars with caution.

I shall hope to hear from you tomorrow or next day. Don't neglect to give me every bit of news of which the smallest account can be taken

Ever yours most faithfully

I enclose a letter to Mr Madam from the Editor of the ~~Monday~~ Times. The impression made upon me by it, is not, I confess, very favorable to the degree of influence which Mr J W G likely to secure even in that quarter.

My dear Sir

I send a letter from Mr. J. addressed to you but sent you for my perusal. That letter is calculated to confirm me in the resolution of adhering strictly to the Ann<sup>o</sup> the 14th Aug. in your hand writing, which as I shall show, is the only agreement of which I can recognize.

When you were kind enough to enter into this matter, Mr. J. appeared as you informed me to that basis, & I can clearly prove both by you, by Colonel J. & Mr. J. —'s own letters, that I never was or Mr. J. — or General a consenting party to any other terms than than those contained in that written Mem<sup>o</sup>.

Colonel I. mentioned my name to Mr. J. - & as he was not authorized to do so, I can feel the importance of confining the co-operation to as few persons as possible - it was due to the parties concerned - & to the Editor of the H. - amongst the rest - as regards Col. I. - he is a friend of mine - he had no interest of a personal nature to carry - & could not be prejudiced in any way by being withdrawn from the arrangement - I am however quite ready to state to him all that has passed, & thereby to clear up any doubts, whether previous to Sunday 14th Aug. the date of the Mem<sup>o</sup>: any stipulation - may the remnant promise had ever been made by me thro' Col. I. - as may be inferred from Mr. J. - letter to Gen. -

I will now prove that I never could have made any such promise to Mr. J. - On the contrary that I strongly continued Col. I. - on the subject, pointing out from the very nature of the project that as it could not be a permanent arrangement, there could be no permanent security in favor of Mr. J. - or any other person - This positive refusal arose out of a letter of Mr. J. - of Sunday 11th Augth - in which Mr. J. - states that "he had seen Mr. I. - who had willingly agreed to receive his writings - that Mr. J. - writings sh<sup>d</sup>. not be rejected or neutralized by opposite matter - the connexion was the close & consistent - Mr. J. - reports that Mr. I. - provided the independence of the H. - was preserved & without risk would meet Mr. J. - on this basis;"

Mr. J. - then said in this letter that with an income of £2500 a y. without being a mercenary, he ought not to embark without an immediate & permanent assurance - by permanent he says he means, that he should not be called upon to break up his plan of life without being secured against loss in a

in a mere temporary expedient — My distinct answer to Col. J — that it was quite impossible for me to make any permanent arrangement — which would suit Mr. J — who ought on no account to relinquish his present objects for a contingency — that with difficulty we could manage the means of paying £500 a month for the political control of the Herald, out of which Mr. J — w. arrange his portion with the Editor, & that such must be the precarious nature of the plan that either party might be off at giving a month's notice — I also never departed from the condition if we came to terms, that the conversion of the H — should be immediate, our great object being to create an imperium whilst the Reform Bill was before us.

I further required two or three days before I could give any answer or make up my mind to enter at all into any Cont. with Mr. J — The distinct proof is before me in a note of Col. J — written to me on Saturday

Saturday 13th Augst - the day I met you in town, in which note it is demonstrated beyond a doubt that no decision of any kind had been made <sup>by</sup> Col. J. & Mr. J. - up to Saturday evening 13th Augst. Col. J. says, "I met Mr. J. in Pall-mall (Saturday noon) who says he feels bound to go to his friend Lord J. - & tell him that he has made up his mind to take a diff. course in consequence of the perilous position in which the country is placed - "I (Col. J.) could not interfere in such a point, but simply stated I had not seen you & that I took it for granted, we should not come to a decision till Monday or Tuesday when Mr. J. would be returned to town - "I told him the moment I heard any thing pro or con, I w<sup>d</sup>. communicate with him & so we parted." "I shall of course say nothing more to him till you have made up of mind" - Col. J. concludes his note by an allusion to the risk of being jockeyed out of the first instalment of money "which with Mr. J. I deem to be impossible" - Mr. J. I do not know -

Can any more decisive proof be adduced, that up to Saturday Evening 13th Augth no promise much less any stipulation had been made between Col. J. & Mr. J. -

Your part in this transaction commenced on Saturday the 13th & I think you can very distinctly prove that no terms expressed or implied were claimed by Mr. J. - when you saw him on Sunday the 14th - It is true he urged a larger Sum to be paid down - but he would not & did not claim a larger advance as a condition, my mind as Col. J. says on Saturday night not having been made up. Therefore whatever may be Mr. J.'s claims or grievances they date from Augth 14th - From this date I appeal confidently to you whether Mr. J. has any reason to complain of me - I am the person who really has a right to complain - I never w<sup>d</sup>. have authorized you to place £1000 in another persons hands for a specific object, if Mr. J. - under his own name had not asserted on the 11th that he had Mr. J.'s consent to the arrangement - I always stipulated & the Sum<sup>n</sup> of the 14th proves it that the conversion altho' gradual in time should be perceptible - The whole of the week the H. - showed if possible more than ordinary violence ag<sup>t</sup>. the Anti - reform party - On Saturday the 20th Mr. J. - writes to you "The H. - has nothing - but still I think it may be managed quietly & cautiously." In reply you say to Mr. J. - that I did not like the terms trifled with - On the 23rd in answer to your he admits in a g<sup>d</sup>. degree that the attempt had failed. On the 24th Wednesday you came up to town - you ascertained that nothing had been done & on the 25th Thursday you visited Mr. J. - Thus 14 days after Mr. J. - had written that he had secured the H. - nothing had been in fact accomplished - may in his in his letter of the 23rd Mr. J. says "it is of no concern to me whether the decision is the entire off or on — I shall act therein as directed by your advice"

Can it be alleged therefore, that from the 11th to the 25th of interference marred Mr. J.'s operations? certainly not. — From the 14th you are acquainted with every step that has been taken & I believe Mr. J. told you he had no objection to your seeing Mr. J., & I therefore feel strongly that Mr. J. has no justifiable cause of complaint agt. me either before or after the 14th Augst.

I have entered into this explanation, to prove that I have strictly adhered to every point agreed upon — & that if his expectations have been deceived, they have not been marred either by you or by me — He has had full scope — the money was punctually placed in his hands in consequence of his written assertion that the Editor had consented — that money was given given for a specific object which has not been accomplished by Mr. J. — I believe that money or at least £750 of it — in honor he is bound to return it — I do not doubt that he will do so — but as a proof of my desire to adhere to any agreement, I am ready to proceed, if Mr. J. can convert the 14th by Saturday next, according to the plan of the 14th & provided the expiration of time be not converted into a fresh claim for valuable time.

If this cannot now be done, I believe the immediate restoration of the sum deposited in his hands for that object & no other.

Before I had thought you or Mr. J. any communication with Mr. J. — I consulted Dr. Farnborough — He described Mr. J. as a man of Honor & a gentleman — You did the same — & have been privy to every thing that has passed. How can

I in reason or propriety release Mr. J. - from the repayment of £750 - In fact I cannot do so, unless I borrow the money & pay it out of my own pocket - or give explanations which w<sup>d</sup> be painful in the extreme - not to me for an object which my friend Lord J. - is in the habit of expecting, but to others - I must vindicate the course I have taken, justified by Mr. J. - letter of the 11th Aug<sup>r</sup> - & I therefore request to pay Mr. J. - to restore immediately £750 to you this whom it was deposited in his hands -

In the whole course of my experience I never knew a case so curiously perverted - On the written faith of Mr. J. - letter 11th Aug<sup>r</sup> that the Board w<sup>d</sup> accept the proposed terms, a third party by a written Memo<sup>r</sup>. of 14th Aug<sup>r</sup> opposed to the plan - & prove his sincerity by paying the deposit for a specific object - that object is not fulfilled, or near its fulfillment, & the third party is then to be told that the Services rendered & time lost in the failure of the Proposer's own promises, are worth more than the Sum of £250 !!!

I have no objection to your sending this letter if you think proper to Mr. J. - repeating my claim to the immediate restoration of the £750.

I am My Dear Sir, Yours very truly
A. Howard

I am quite ready if Mr. J. - wishes it to refer the whole of this subject to Mr. Clerk who is it appears a friend to both of you & am willing to abide the arbitration - for I cannot doubt that Mr. J. - had & conducted a gentleman & keeping the Society of friends of my own, sees this affair in a mistaken light, but not intentionally in an unfair or mercenary point of view -

Sir

Not having been honoured with any communication from you as I was promised & being thus destitute of the means to carry my negotiations into effect, I have, perhaps, no right to address myself to you.

But as the matter is of much consequence and of deep concernment to yourself & political friends I must entreat your perusal of the open letter enclosed in answer to one I received last night from Mr. Glij.

That I consider myself most unpleasantly implicated & extremely ill treated in this business, I cannot disguise: it now rests with you whether we shall endeavour to remedy what has been set wrong & proceed cordially, or whether an opposite cause shall be finally adopted

I have the honour to be
Sir

Your very obedient faithful Humble servant.

Grove House Brompton 28th Aug

If I found the purport of your conversation, yesterday, at variance with my sense of right and honourable in the business in which I have (now deeply to my regret) been engaged; your letter confirming that line of conduct and substituting most erroneous views of the transaction, cannot be satisfactory to me. I will therefore, in my own plain way, remind you of the real state of the case, so that if you are being made an instrument to throw me, in my turn, "over the bridge", you may at least have your eyes open to my opinions upon the occasion.

It is neither consistent with fact nor consent for me to allow that the negotiations or exertions in this matter, commenced with "the morning of your call upon me"; or that they were "limited to a single object"; ample proofs to the contrary of both exist in memory and in writing. There are also ample proofs of my being tempted to embark in this service by large promises; out of which I am now asked to retire like a Menial, with a paltry consideration for my time, and in the teeth of my explicit and reiterated statements that I neither could nor would stir in it, without being assured of its continuance for at least one year on the scale offered to me.

And, on what ground am I used thus, even wishing, alone, the single purpose for which it is pretended I was employed? I did carry this very negotiation to a favourable issue; and I require to be told where are the means promised promised me by which I was to be enabled to complete the terms? Where is the intelligence which was to be furnished? I have not had one communication except a harsh note from you which failed in consequence of the illness of the party. But leaving this - Renewed the treaty, and on Thursday last came to a perfect understanding on the point. What followed? You were to have put it in my power <sup>to communicate</sup> that very afternoon; & the first thing I learnt on Saturday Morning was that, instead of observing my arrangement, you had without my knowledge, yourself sent a paper which was rejected; and unless these steps were taken on purpose to defeat the treaty (of which I confess myself doubtful) I cannot suggest a reason in propriety or common sense, why they were taken. On Thursday I find you, under an assumed name, with the party - an utter stranger to him & unacquainted with his position & feelings - and on my arrival he distinctly marks his purpose by taking me to another room & there privately conferring with me. He never interchanges a syllable with you, and knows you but as my friend. And yet the very next morning, you step in, as if entirely in his confidence in this most delicate business; you supersede me - you have not even the key agreed upon by which my communications were to be admitted; & having thus utterly & imprudently (if as observed already not designedly) kicked down the arrangement, you come very coolly to me and bid me walk out.

This is the result of manoeuvring, when straight forward proceeding was all that was needed to secure the object. And this is a pregnant instance of the mischief of resorting to means against which I all along remonstrated, when I perceived myself being plunged by degrees into so many disingenuous predicaments by similar insincerities.

So much for "the single point" - a point of value, but insofar as I am personally concerned, forming a small portion of the affair as it affects me in every relation of life; and I am astonished at the treatment offered to me when I reflect upon the whole that has taken place. How stands the truth?

I am induced to break off a gratifying & beneficial intercourse with a powerful friend; & to declare to him that I can forward his views no longer. I have no occasion to say at what sacrifice this has been done; all I know is that you cannot compensate me.

I am induced to procure introductions to foreign Ministers to represent myself to them as a person intrusted with the confidence of a high party who will shortly recognize me & my secret mission, and to secure, as I have done, their cordial approbation & co-operation, in influencing the press wheresoever I can, as a great & most desirable object. Am I an outcast in society, that wherever I might meet these distinguished individuals or the friends through whom I approached them, hereafter, I should consent to be regarded in no other light than an impertinent intermeddler, a pretender, or impostor!

I am induced to secure a Weekly Journal of the foremost circulation & influence; for which I hold out inducements, and devote my talents (whatever they may be). The Paper has gone round as any Paper could be rationally expected to change; and I am invited to leave its Editor & his property as unceremoniously in the lurch as I am left myself. But I can not do so; and I must go on with this Journal. Valuable Newspapers are not to be won and discarded like trash; committed to the public & then left to reconcile it how they can.

I am induced with the important object & considerable expectations in view, to lay my lines in many ways & places, that all may contribute to the end: and then, counteracted in the "one affair" - thus pledged, thus responsible, thus entangled in all the rest, I receive a proposition to abandon the Undertaking and sit down quietly with a miserable compliment for the time I have spent.

Now I beg distinctly to say that if (for reasons I cannot clearly fathom) the work is stopped, I am not responsible for the failure. I am still ready & willing to proceed and fulfil my engagements. I will not restore one farthing unless I return the whole; in the event of which I shall deem it due to my own character, which as well as my truth your letter ventures to put in question, to resort to such measures as shall fully vindicate both; though I deplore the circumstance of having allowed myself to be so involved in false positions that I am precluded from honourably explaining the whole of my injurious situation.

I shall not enter into particulars connected with the trouble and expence of my withdrawing myself from my own pursuits, nor with the difficulty of retracting my course: they were previously, and repeatedly, and seriously enforced, and I will only simply declare that if any man had come to me with a thousand pounds, and nothing ulterior, to induce me to act as I have done I would instantly have declined the proposal - if he had spoken to me of two or of five hundred pounds I should have deemed it an insult to my understanding, or, if he was not ignorant of my concerns, a personal insult, and have replied accordingly.

I am very sorry that this letter is of necessity so long; I also lament that it is of necessity so strongly expressed; but I beg, in conclusion, to declare upon my honour, that it is written without the slightest diminution of my regard for you, - without the slightest desire for abandoning the enterprise. I think you made a gross mistake in interfering between me and Mr. T - ; but I still hope it was a mistake, and not a breach of good faith towards me in any quarter. If so, I repeat, I am prepared to devote myself to the cause

I am
Dear Sir - Yours faithfully
W. Jerdan

P.S. I have considered it right to transmit this, open, through Sir H. H - and not through my worthy friend T. Clarke, as desired. I could have no objection to that Gentleman's being made privy to the transaction, but the reverse: yet after the binding assurances to utter secrecy I should have expected that not a syllable of it would have been breathed to mortal without my consent.

My Dear Sir

I have read Mr. J. - note & the Act. in the Herald - I consent to defer taking measures till a week has elapsed - but a story ext. on Portugal from a Correspondent widely differs from that speculation which Mr. J. - said he had made with Mr. L. in his letter of the 11th Aug. - That assurance induced me to come forward - & as you know to borrow £1000 on my personal responsibility, trusting that the Conversion of the H. - when accomplished would justify me in seeking repayment - I cannot suffer the Cop. or consent to extortion -

I am therefore determined at the end of a week, if (as I foresee), the terms of the Act of the 14th Aug. are not fulfilled, to lay Mr. J. - letter of the 11th Aug. before Mr. J. — thro' a friend of Mr. J. — in order to ascertain what reasons have caused Mr. J. — to decline the terms, which Mr. J. — reports he <sup>is</sup> willingly consented to accept before the 11th.

Augth — Having unravelled the transaction, I shall consult Mr. Clarke, because he is a friend of Mr. J. — as well as yours, and altho' it may be painful to me to compromise L<sup>d</sup>. J. — thro' Mr. J. — correspondence, my mind is made up, and I will insist upon the restoration of £750 or take active measures. I am My Dear Sir, Yours

A. Harding

To inform Mr. J. — of the slightest protest for saying, that having changed my mind I wish to know him over, you are authorized to repeat that I will adhere to the demand of 14th Augth — but to no other — & that I have nothing to say of time valuable services, or any other papers except the A — D.

Wednesday half-past 12.

My dear L<sup>r</sup> Henry

I have seen Jordan & the substance of what passed between us is as follows.

It appears that no definitive arrangement had been or is yet made. Mr J, saw Mr

East yesterday at 2 o'clock, and made him a tender of money, which the latter declined for the present. He stated that the paper was managed by a committee, - that he could not undertake to carry its politics over, on his own responsibility, - & threw out hints that the Tory party were already negotiating - This must allude to Mr Fullerton's proceeding, to which it strikes me that an immediate stop ought to be put. Mr J agreed, however, to insert any articles sent by Mr J. who wrote one yesterday evening (from Mr. J. to him by myself) and sent it to the office at ten o'clock. It is as much surprised as we at the time of the paper this morning.

It assures me that he will fit an explicit statement of the cause of this proceeding, as well as of the course which Mr J. means to follow, and lay it before me at six this evening.

I am but half satisfied with all this, yet I don't see how for the present we can help ourselves.
It is not quite the thing, that the money should have been required of us yesterday, as a sine qua non, yet that it should remain up to this moment in Mr J.'s hands.

I have this outline for you to consider in case we don't meet before the evening. The only step which you can take at once, is, to stop Mr Fullerton's treaty; & that, as taking away every ground of subterfuge, I would advise at all hazard

Ever most faithfully yours
G. R. G. L. G.

I shall be at the Anniversary at five o'clock

Wednesday Morning
Aug 31

(Dear Gley)

I have received your note of last night, previous to which I had seen the H. of today, the aspect of which led me instantly to write to W. T. My letter requires a distinct understanding; I note that of words & assurances, repeated by acts.

As for the complaint of your principal, I could have wished that both that & the threat of "going to extremities" had been avoided. If I ceased to complain, I know not who has a ground to take up the measure); & if there were a desire to go forward cordially with me it seems the last thing that would be resorted to, to make an ally by menace.

You charge me with entertaining unjustified suspicions. If a plan were formed to break with me, what course could be more injurious than this. To treat a friend who from the nature of the common cause "should possess all your confidence, as a foe to be terrified, is a strange mode of procedure by way of cordial & effective co-operation.

Yours

Dear Sir

Yours truly
J. P. Tolson

I shall for my own sake bring matters to an issue as speedily as possible and act according to my own sense of right. Meanwhile if left alone, at least visitation is unnecessary.

My dear Sir. Though we seem to understand each other when we meet, the result appears to come out not nearly so agreeably to, but in direct opposition to what I had reason to expect.

The Herald of this morning makes no use of my communication, and it was more entirely perverted into the Reform bill than ever, far beyond the opinions you yourself yesterday expressed.

Now I am at a loss to understand this. It is a pity to go on with an intercourse at considerable trouble and with the view of mutual benefit as well as public improvement, if the consequence is to be the furnishing of articles, not only not to be used, but to be answered; and as I have been very frank and candid with you, I think it is due to me to say (if it be so) that there are existing reasons to prevent my papers being acceptable. If they are submitted to a palmer and fastidious scrutiny, to discover reasons for rejection, and you either cannot or do not think it right to controvert this, my proceeding would only tend to make me ridiculous.

My paper of yesterday (which is this moment returned) was hardly if at all political, and curious as showing the altered position of Europe upon a point, to which the attention of all the states and statesmen in the world is at present directed. If there be referred I hardly see what would be well to avoid, and this perception must put it out of my power to employ resources which I am doubtful and bound are merely wasted.

I shall be very desirous to have a better understanding if compatible with your feelings and views; but if you do not desire it, the more direct and the best thing to be done, would be to declare it explicitly to me.

I have but great advantages in your way and offer not lightly to be shrouded. It did possess my mind that nothing could be more intelligible and in path more plain.

But if I am not allowed fair play and an open course, it would be more consistent to give a direct denial. Pray let me hear from you as soon as you conveniently can and adieu.

Lyke) W. Hudson

In giving this matter your mature consideration you need not fear that any other individual shall ever again interfere in the arrangement, or offer propositions of a nature to which you could not listen.
