

Hickonomics

type 3
the banker

V

Meet Mr Wegg, Banker

The drama of

In economic history the banker was always the villain of the piece. In his early out-of-door days in Italy angry citizens <sup>at times</sup> smashed up his "banco" or "bench" and made him a "bankrupt". This didn't stop him. He moved indoors & kept a strong box. Medieval kings pulled out his teeth and boiled him in oil, - or at any rate boiled his fellow-craftsmen, the counterfeiters. But that didn't stop him either. He now has false teeth and boils the public in oil. That at least is the view of such high authorities as my old friend and one-time colleague, <sup>Professor</sup> ~~Dr~~ Frederick Soddy. He and others hold that the banker in "coining credit" defrauds the public of what belongs to society at large.

Personally I don't see it: as witness here

Hicko

Meet Mr Wegg - Banker

The Hickonomic Theory of Banking

You may have heard of Silas Wegg,
The Man who had the wooden leg,
Eh, what?

Yes, yes, - in one of Dickens' Books, - why not?

One of those most attractive Crooks for whom we Bankers

Really, - though Dickens didn't know it,
But presently I mean to show it, -
Wegg was a Banker.

Space >

Wegg at a Table by the Street

Beneath a green Umbrella,

Some Straw to warm his foot (not Feet),

Sold Bills & Sale, Forms & Receipt

And Ballad Music by the Street
Poor Fellow!

Little he'd need his Trade to serve, -

A Book and Pen

An Empty Box marked "Cash Reserve"

In home-made Stencil;

Mark 'Debit' here and 'Credit' there
 As Taste and Fancy might declare,
 'Loans' on the left, 'Deposits' right,
 Wegg's Books would balance every night
 Should <sup>any</sup> ready cash come of it,
 Then take it out and call it Profit.

space

-----
 Now could you just imagine this,
 That's all a Banker really is!
 Ask Frederick Soddy; He affirms
 A Banker, in his lowest terms,
 Is just a sort of Silas Wegg;
 He may not have a wooden leg,
 A new Analogy will serve,
 He has to have an Iron Nerve.
 But all he does is take a Pen
 Write Entries in and out again,
 In fact, the way that Soddy said it
 The Banker is "creating credit,"
 Just as the bee secretes it Money
 The Banker sits <sup>secreting</sup> ~~and secretes~~ Money.

A Banker really would be able To work like Wegg with just a table,
 Or like those Men you often see
 Work with three thumbles and a Pea.

Let's fancy how the Thing might be:

In pure Imagination, we
 The Abstract Banker now will see,
 The Scene of all External rob
 With just the Banker on his job.

Sneak up and watch his furtive Poise: . . . .

Step gently, Soddy, gently! loys!

The Fellow bears the slightest noise

shau

He sits there in his tall silk Hat,
 A great big Ledger laid out flat;

A rounded Glass beside him set
 With which to magnify a deb,

An Ink Eraser, short and stout

For ~~rotten~~ rubbing a Deposit out

Ink + a lovely "Bankers" Pen

With which to write it in again

shau

Soddy, you guessed it when <sup>you</sup> said it!
 Hush! Watch him now, He's "coining credit."

He dreads us! Hold your Breath!

Look past his Arm and Underneath,

See that last Flourish where he joined it,

The thing is done! By George! He's coined it.

Oh what a Crook the fellow is!

'Soddy, do come and look at this!

See what he did? He wrote in "Loan," made out, you see, That was his own,

"Deposit" next, — devious what?

They owed him what they never got!

Now if they go to cash a cheque

The next man gets it in the neck.

No Juggler with the ear earier air
Plucks half a dollar from your hair;

no Juggler from ~~that~~ <sup>his</sup> empty Hat

Takes out a Rabbit just like that!

And is it possible to say

That's all a Bank is anyway

Soddy, you think
~~Is it just ink?~~
It's all just ink.

(4)

There is no doubt that long ago
That's all a Banker was, you know.

In Sunny Italy he sat,

He didn't even need a Hat.

He just laid out his little Stall
In <sup>Venice</sup> Venice & the Grand Canal.

His 'banca' (bench) from <sup>morning</sup> <sup>morning</sup> till dark
By the Cathedral Northward,

And all around him and above

Could the Cathedral with its Dove

How early had he caught the Sense

a parchment, for stake >

Of gaining public confidence

A simple Stock in Faddehew,
Some a medieval writing paper

~~Cash~~ <sup>a pointed stylus, just for style</sup> in a bowl, all clipped sworn,

And paper money beats tom

~~Round~~ Round Counters, very soiled <sup>sorry</sup> sorry,

Like Sales-Tax Milk Tops in Missouri

The simple Folk, <sup>unused</sup> unused sharks

Around S1 Marks, <sup>were</sup> were can marks

He worked it like a poker Game

And Heads Tails were all the Tails same.

24 a Pergamentum Parchment Pile, a pointed Stylus, just for Style,

5
But though he did the Public up
They sometimes turned & yelled "you pup!"
"You stole our money, you gotta Quitta de Biz, you're banca rotta -"
They break his Bench, his Cash Conal
And throw him in the Grand Canal
And ~~in the water with a splash~~
He had the Water with a splash -
That was the first financial Crash

>

—
#

⑦

No disbelief his soul can smirch
If he ~~sets~~ <sup>erects</sup> up an A. I. Church
And indicates his moral Bank
With marble columns on a Bank
Stable and strong his Life is set
On a broad Base & bonded Debt

➤
More still, the man, <sup>d. station</sup> ~~the~~ <sup>the</sup> ~~Banker~~ knows
He has to have the proper clothes.
Alone among creations poor
Man is the only one needs Dress.
The noble Horse that strikes the plain,
Regards its saddle with disdain,
No string & Pearls, no <sup>Diadem,</sup> ~~Diadem~~
Is needed for the Banyan then
But man without meticulous
Attire is just ridiculous

➤
And most the Banker's obligation
To do to indicate his station
With confidence the <sup>world</sup> ~~hand~~ inspire
By the bon ton of his attire,

In flowing Tweed his Form disguise
And trim a Vandyke Beard to size.

> —————
With this Apology, we may
Turn to the Banking & Today

> x . . . . .
—————

The Poet says he knows a Bank whereon the wild
Thyme grows,

Embedded in a Sea of blue, the Petivian the blows,
And every Air that wanders there is scented by the Rose.
But let him keep his fragrant Heap of Garbage if he will.
His Bank I find a trifle rank: I know a better still.

I know a Bank and where it is, I do not care to say
Tall, Grecian columns are its Face, a Church across the way Narrow & clean is the Street between and dark at the noon & Day.

<sup>The</sup> ~~These~~ forcents know no heavier Noise
Than the muffled Roll of a rolling Royce,
All baser traffic, under a Fine
Forbidden by a Traffic Signo
No garish Sunlight penetrates where
The left is money the right is Prayer.
Here only have their Habitat
The Pauper and the Plutocrat.
The Poor Pass in on the <sup>right</sup> to pray
The Rich on the left pass in to pay.

The Poor through a Portal wide and high,
 And the Rich through a Door like a Needle's Eye
 From the church the sound of the Organ floats
 In a golden Flood of its liquid Notes,
 From the Bank then flows no musical tide
 The Floaty & Notes is all done inside

—
 Inside the Bank is a wide wide Aisle,
 The Guide Book calls it a 'Peristyle';
 And after you have through that you come
 To a pillared Hall called the Atrium;
 The Guide Book says that the Frescoes on
 The ceiling recall the Parthenon;
 So lofty the Hall, so dim the light
 The ceiling is almost out of sight,

So still, so calm it is, they say
 That at times the <sup>Folk</sup> walk from ~~across~~ the Way,

By accident wander in to pray
 The Bank permits it, — in fact is glad,
 A thing like that is a splendid ad.

A watchful Attendant is prowling around, grizzled
and hard and grim,
No Bandit would lend it, I'll be bound, to get in a fight
with him;

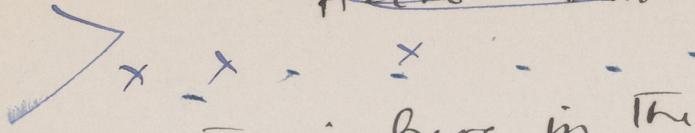

For the Ribbon ~~adorn~~ adorning his Uniform's Edge,
I rather suspect is a Privilege
That he got at the Battle of Viny Ridge.

Nay, honest Viny, eye me not,
I'm restless, yes, but I'll tell you what,
My Business here in the Bank, I own,
Is to ask for a Thousand Dollar Loan.
I' you think they'll lend it? They must have got <sup>it</sup>
They're waiting, I understand, to "allott it".
But Soddy says all they have to do
Is coin it; # Viny, I' you think it's true?

And with this all Assistant with courteous Bow
Says "~~Sir Silas~~ Wegg, sir, will see you now"
"Mr Midas"

~~Hecks Bank.~~

(11)

 I am standing here in the Atrium, how wide it is and high,

 Counters and ~~Cages~~ <sup>around its side</sup> round its <sup>Edge</sup> space in one vast Horse-shoe lie,

 And Footsteps o'er the Flagstone floor fall echoes to die.

Noiseless the People seem to glide

 From Desk to Counter to stand beside

 The courtly Tellers who <sup>bend</sup> bend their Necks

 To Plutocrat Dowagers signing Checks,

 Courtly Tellers all slick and shav,

 And everyone a Gentleman;

 While further back under lights of green,

 The Ledger-keepers are dimly seen

 You know what they're doing, - ask anybody

 Who's read the works of <sup>Sir Frederick</sup> Professor Soddy

They're busy with that contemplative trick

 Which is known as bankers arithmetic.

~~When  $1 + 1 = 2$~~

~~one plus one adds up to two~~

~~If it's coming to me. But not to you~~

 With Credit and Debit in Ink expressed

 And Nothing from Nothing leaves Interest

Behind Mahogany and Teak ~~there~~ sits <sup>Mr Midas</sup> ~~Sir Silas Wegg~~
Courtous and Debonair and sleek, he needs no Wooden leg,
The whole Environment makes good with heavy leather, polished wood,

And pannelled Walls with just a Hint of Aquavalle or Mezzotint <sup>tint</sup>
No vulgar Signs of Common Toil
The polished Tables Surface spoils
A pointed Pen laid out straight
Beside a marble paper-weight,
A sage green Blister, which, I think,
Has never seen a spot of Ink,
~~Here~~ And Daffodil and Violet
<sup>in front of</sup> ~~Before~~ <sup>Midas</sup> ~~Sir Silas Wegg~~ are set.

No titled Sovereign, I confess,
Exceeds <sup>The Bankers</sup> ~~Sir Silas~~ courtliness,
I really cannot fancy how
A King could make a statelier Bow,
Or say with a more gracious Tone
"The bank will entertain your loan!"
Just thank, - how easily its done!
I'm back within the stream,
Thrilled with Emotion, I must own,
The Bank has entertained my loan,

No Entertainment that I know,
No Comedy or Minstrel show,
In sense of fun <sup>so</sup> well sustains
As when a Banker entertains!
I stand there <sup>dreaming</sup> dreaming all alone,
The Bank has entertained my loan!

Then breaks upon my inner sight
The thought, Is Frederick Soddy right?
~~The~~ It sounds too simple, - I am sure
There must be, must be something more.

For Midas,
Sir Silas, writing my account
Can "coin" me any God's amount.
Can write with ink and call it "loan"
But can he write it for his own?

> Of course he can't! Could Silas Weg,
The real one with the wooden legs
By writing with his Pencil Stub enough himself, - ah! there's the rub.

The banker lends, but at the bush
All that he gets is Interest.
He coins the public credit, serves it,
Gets Interest, and well deserves it.

>

<

Behind Mahogany and Teak ~~there~~ sits <sup>Mr Midas</sup> ~~Sir Silas Wegg~~
Courtious and Debonair and sleek, he needs no Wooden leg,
The whole Environment makes good with heavy leather, polished wood,

And pannelled Walls with just a Hint of Aquarelle or Mezz<sup>o</sup> tint
No vulgar Signs of Common Toil
The polished Tables Surface spoils
A pointed Pen<sup>icil</sup> laid out straight
Beside a marble paper-weight,
A sage green Blotter, which, I think,
Has never seen a spot of Ink,
There And Daffodil and Violet
<sup>in front of</sup> ~~Before~~ <sup>Mr Midas</sup> ~~Sir Silas Wegg~~ are set.

No titled Sovereign, I confess,
Exceeds <sup>The Bankers</sup> ~~Sir Silas~~ courtliness,
I really cannot fancy how
A Kij could make a staterow Bow,
Or say with a more gracious Tone
"The bank will entertain your loan"
Just thank, - how easily its done!
I'm back within the stream,
Thrilled with Emotion, I must own,
The Bank has entertained my loan,

No Entertainment that I know,
No Comedy or Minstrel show,
In sense of fun <sup>so</sup> well sustains
As when a Banker entertains!
I stand there <sup>dreaming</sup> all alone -
The Bank has entertained my loan!

Then breaks upon my inner sight
The thought, Is Frederick Soddy right?
The 'I' sounds too simple, - I am sure
There must be, must be something more.

For Medas,
Sir Silas, writing my account
Can "coin" me any God's amount.

Can write with ink and call it "loan"
But can he write it for his own?

> Of course he can't! Could Silas Weg,
The real one with the wooden legs,
By writing with his Pencil Stub enrich himself, - ah! there's the rub.

The bankers lend, but at the best
All that he gets is Interest.
He coins the public credit, serves it,
Gets Interest, and well deserves it.

>

— —

And at that thought a sudden flash of future Visions
And what may happen later on, appear before my Eyes,

Suppose <sup>from</sup> angry Argument, from bitter Social
Hate,

Wild social revolution starts, - too late, alas, too late.

The Demons you are raising how you cannot then
abate,

Suppose, suppose the Bank goes down in fire, and Flame and ~~blood~~ Smoke

The day that on that peaceful <sup>Town</sup> street, fierce revolution broke

With <sup>Fury or</sup> the shouts of <sup>Scum</sup> ~~Scum~~ <sup>Scum</sup> ~~Scum~~
of people have stormed the abomin;

The vision rises before the eye
Teller in eyes, who fight and die
Not ~~delusion~~ <sup>delusion</sup> but fierce with Bayes

The Taylor ~~road~~ <sup>road</sup> across the Edge
And Ving Bridge dies where he stood
Grim squiggled & smeared with Blood

(10)

The Bank has been rifled high & low,
It's the PEOPLES TREASURY now, you know;

The ledgers are scattered & thrown away
What need for ledgers the PEOPLE say
Where each owns all and may take what he may.

In the noisy atrium now these floats
The acrid smell of the Sheepskin Coats
The Flagstones are coated still with mud

That no one cleans, and with stains of blood

In the Sanction Room the Rulers are;
There's Hylitch, the Commissioner
Smoking a heavy black cigar
And ~~about~~ <sup>Heiny</sup> the Halfwit, wise of war.

Heiny

Hylitch the Commissioner, - heavy boots all mud, Hylitch the Commissioner, - features cut from wood,
Hylitch the Commissioner with a mind misled Born for a dented Seaf, made a Boss instead, Hylitch the Commissioner hard as is an iron bar with a Hand of Lead
But in war leaders,
And to train leaders,

And underneath a smothered fire
Of what was once a righteous fire.

And with him <sup>Heiny</sup> Aber the Halfwit-sits,
As cruel as only can be halfwits,
A thing with a watery weak blue eye
And slithering features all awry,
Contemptible and treacherous,

And underneath all lecherous -
Such things may revolution spue
To govern ~~now~~ <sup>some day</sup> we and you.

Heaped on the table all the while
Is greasy money in a pile,
Uncounted cash from vault & store -
"Come take it, Brother, here, take some more!"

> ~~For the~~
For the Brothers yes, - but for others what?
The scurge, the ~~thing~~ <sup>danger</sup> - picture their lot

> . . . . .

And with that The Vision breaks and is fled
 I in back in the atrium, - no one's dead,
 The Teller, still living and debonair,
 Hands me a cheque book all unaware,
 But old Viny Ridge has a questioning stare

And the Customers slide and move and glide
 Ah, good old World! let me back inside

Soddy, you're wrong. It is not so!
 The Banker gives us a Quid <sup>has</sup> ~~two~~ <sup>two</sup> Quid ~~Mr~~ <sup>Mr</sup> ~~Silas~~ <sup>Midas</sup>, shake! you're the Real Stuff
 - Well, another thousand, would be enough

#

Subtle canon

(6)

But Bankers, Gentle both or few
Soon got to know a Thief or two;
Their place was not the open Air,
Their Business was not on the Square

In fact, they realized their Trade
Did so much better in the Stade!

The Banker, - it is not his Fault
Needs first a all a first class Vault.

It is a Rule that Bankers shall > Keep right away from a Canal.

May more than that, - they found the Sense
Of all mankind lives on Pretence,
Love's Dignity and Form and Style,
A Temple and a stately Pile.

Man cannot stand upon his own,
Must fortify himself in stone,
Express himself in Urn or Bust
In statue or Gray, I say he must.

⑦

No disbelief his soul can smirch
If he ~~sets up~~ <sup>erects</sup> an A. I. Church
And indicates his moral Bank
With marble columns on a Bank
Stable and strong his Life is set
On a broad Base & bonded Debt

➤
More still, the man, <sup>d Station</sup> ~~the~~ <sup>the</sup> ~~Banker~~ knows
He has to have the proper clothes.
Alone among creatures poor
Man is the only one needs Dress.
The noble horse that strikes the plain,
Regards its saddle with disdain,
No string & Pearl, no <sup>Diadem,</sup> ~~Diadem~~
Is needed for the Banyan then
But man without meticulous
Attire is just ridiculous

➤
And most the Banker's Obligation
Is to indicate his Station
With confidence <sup>words</sup> ~~the~~ word inspire
By the bon ton of his Attire,

In flowing Throed his Form disguise
And trim a Vandyke Beard to size.

With this Apology, we may
Turn to the Banking & Today

> x . . . . .
—

The Poet says he knows a Bank whereon the wild
 Thyme grows,
 Embedded in a Sea of blue, the Periwinkle blows,
 And every Air that wanders there is scented by the Rose.
 But let him keep his fragrant Heap of Garbage if he will.
 His Bank I find a trifle rank: I know a better still.

I know a Bank and where it is, I do not care to say
 Tall, Grecian columns are its Face, a Church across the way
 Narrow & clean is the Street between and dark at the noon & day.

~~These~~ <sup>The</sup> porcents know no heavier Noise
 Than the muffled Roll of a rolling Royce,
 All baser Traffic, under a Fine
 Forbidden by a Traffic Signo
 No garish Sunlight penetrates where
 The left is money the right is Prayer.
 Here only have their Habitat
 The Pauper and the Plutocrat.
 The Poor Pass in on the <sup>right</sup> to pray
 The Rich on the left pass in to pay.

The Poor through ~~as~~ Portal wide and High,
 And the Rich through a Door like a Needle's Eye
 From the church the sound of the Organ floats
 In a golden Flood of its Liquid Notes,
 From the Bank then flows no musical tide
 The Floating Notes is all done inside

—
 Inside the Bank is a wide wide Aisle,
 The Guide Book calls it a 'Peristyle';
 And after you have through that you come
 To a pillared Hall called the Atrium;
 The Guide Book says that the Frescoes on
 The ceiling recall the Parthenon;
 So lofty the Hall, so dim the light
 The ceiling is almost out of sight,

So still, so calm it is, they say
 That at times the <sup>Folk</sup> ~~people~~ from ~~across~~ the Way,

By accident wander in to pray.

The Bank permits it, — in fact is glad,
 A thing like that is a splendid ad.

~~Hecks Bank.~~

(11)

I am standing here in the Stream, how wide it is and high,

Counters and Cages round its <sup>side</sup> ~~side~~
Counters and Cages round its <sup>Edge</sup> ~~Space~~ in one vast Horse-shoe lie,

And Footsteps o'er the Flagstone Floor fall echoless to die.

Noiseless the People seem to glide
From Desk to Counter to stand beside
The courtly Tellers who <sup>bend</sup> bend their necks
To Plutocrat Dowagers signing Checks,
Courtly Tellers all stick and shaw,
And everyone a Gentleman;
While further back under lights of green,

The Ledger Keepers are dimly seen
You know what they're doing, - ask anybody
Who's read the works of <sup>Sir Frederick</sup>
Professor Soddy

They're busy with that contemplative trick
Which is known as bankers arithmetic.

~~When it is as~~
~~one plus one adds up to two~~

~~if it coming to me. but not to you~~

With Credit and Debit in Ink expressed
And Nothing from Nothing leaves Interest

A watchful Attendant is prowling around, grizzled
and hard and grim,
No Bandit would lend it, I'll be bound, to get in a fight
with him;

For the Ribbon adorning his Uniform's Edge,
I rather suspect is a Privilege
That he got at the Battle of Viny Ridge.

Nay, honest Viny, eye me not,
I'm restless, yes, but I'll tell you what,
My Business here in the Bank, I own,
Is to ask for a Thousand Dollar Loan.
Do you think they'll lend it? They must have got it They're waiting, I understand, to "allot it".
But Soddy says all they have to do
Is coin it; Viny, do you think it's true?

And with this an Assistant with courteous Bow
Says "~~Sir Silas~~ Wegg, sir, will see you now"
"Mr Midas"

Behind Mahogany and Teak ~~there~~ sits <sup>Mr Midas</sup> ~~Sir Silas~~ Wegg
Courtious and Debonair and sleek, he needs no Wooden leg,
The whole Environment makes good with Leany <sup>leather</sup>, polished <sup>wood</sup>,

And panelled Walls with just a Hint of Aquarelle or Mezzotint<sup>o</sup>
No vulgar Signs of Common Toil
The polished Table's Surface spoils
A pointed Pen<sup>al</sup> laid out straight
Beside a marble paper-weight,
A safe green Blister, which, I think,
Has never seen a spot of Ink,
There And Daffodil and Violet
<sup>in front of Mr Midas</sup> ~~Before Sir Silas Wegg are set.~~

No titled Sovereign, I confess,
Exceeds <sup>The Bankers</sup> ~~Sir Silas~~ courtliness.
I really cannot fancy how
A King could make a statelier Bow,
Or say with a more gracious Tone
"The bank will entertain your loan!"

Just thank, - how easily it's done!
I'm back within the curtain,
Thrilled with Emotion, I must own,
The Bank has entertained my loan!

No Entertainment that I know,
No Comedy or Minstrel show,
In sense of fun <sup>so</sup> well sustains
As when a Banker entertains!
I stand there <sup>dreaming</sup> all alone,
The Bank has entertained my loan!

Then breaks upon my inner sight
The thought, Is Frederick Soddy right?
The 'I' sounds too simple, - I am sure
There must be, must be something more.

For <sup>Midas</sup> Silas, writing my account
Can "coin" me any God's amount.

Can write with Ink and call it "loan"
But can he write it for his own?

Of course he can't! Could Silas Weg,
The real one with the wooden legs

By writing with his Pencil Stub
Enough himself, - ah! there's the rub.

The bankers lend, but at the best
All that he gets is Interest.

He 'coins' the public credit, serves it,
Gets Interest, and well deserves it.

And at that thought a sudden flash of future Visions
And what may happen later on, appear before my Eyes,

Suppose <sup>from</sup> angry Argument, from bitter Social
Hate,

Wild social revolution starts, - too late, alas, too late,

The Demons you are raising how you cannot then
abate,

Suppose, suppose the Bank goes down in fire,
and Flame and ~~plume~~ Smoke

The day that on that peaceful <sup>Town</sup> street, fierce Revolution
broke

With <sup>Fury or</sup> the shouts of <sup>Scum</sup> ~~Scum~~ <sup>Scum</sup> ~~Scum~~
of people have stormed the abomin;

The vision rises before the eye

Teller in eyes, who fight and die

Not <sup>delusion</sup> ~~delusion~~ but fire with Rages

The Taylor + dead across the eye
<sup>then</sup>

And Ving Bridge dies where he stood
Grim squiggled + smeared with Blood

The Bank has been rifled high & low,
It's the PEOPLES TREASURY now, you know;

The ledgers are scattered & thrown away
What need for ledgers the PEOPLE say
Where each owns all and may take what
he may.

In the noisy atrium now these floats
The acrid smell of the Sheepskin Coats
The Flagstones are coated still with
mud

That no one cleans, and with stains of blood

In the Sanction Room the Rulers are;

There's Glyitch, the Commissar
Smoking a heavy black cigar
And ~~about~~ <sup>Heiny</sup> the Halfwit, wise & war.

Heiny

Glyitch the Commissar, - Heavy boots all mud, Glyitch the Commissar, - features cut from wood,
Glyitch the Commissar with a mind misled
Born for a devoted Seef, made a Boss instead, Glyitch the Commissar hard as is an iron bar
with a Hand of Lead
But in war fearless,
And to train leaders,

And underneath a smothered fire
Of what was once a righteous fire.

And with him <sup>Heiny</sup> Aber the Halfwit sits,
As cruel as only can be halfwits,
A thing with a watery weak blue eye
And slithering features all awry,
Contemptible and treacherous,

And underneath all lecherous;
Such things may revolution spur
To govern ~~over~~ <sup>some day</sup> we and you.

Heated on the table all the while
Is greasy money in a pile,
Uncounted cash from vault & store,
"Come take it, Brother, here, take some more!"

> ~~For brother~~
For the Brothers yes, - but for others what?
The scourge, the ~~scourge~~ surgeon - picture this lot

>

And with that The Vision breaks and is fled
 I in back in the atrium, — no one's dead,
 The Teller, still living and debonair,
 Hands me a cheque book all unaware,
 But old Viny Ridge has a questioning stare

—
 And the Customers slide and move and glide
 Th, good old World! let me back inside

—
 Soddy, you're wrong. It is not so!
 The Banker gives us a Quid <sup>two</sup> <sup>two</sup> Quid ~~Mr Silas~~ <sup>Mr Midas</sup>, shake! you're the Real stuff
 — Well, another thousand, would be enough

#

Subtle canon