Dear Mr. Pelham Burn,

I cannot discover that I have received the pamphlet which you promise me in your letter of Nov. 25th.

If it has gone astray perhaps you will kindly let me have another.

Yours sincerely,

Dear Buxton,

Thank you for sending me the views of your neutral friend. [I wish I could see any evidence that Germany is or was willing to conclude a peace on the basis of no annexations, and indemnities. No doubt a considerable number of the German people are, but to my mind all the evidence goes to show that the people in control always intended to get plunder in the East or the West, and preferably in both.] Of course, they play about with "self-defence", and undoubtedly we afford them some useful material, but it seems to me futile to believe, in present circumstances, that they would restore Russia or give Poland independence for anything we could say to them.

Yours sincerely,

J. A. Spender.
